As people grow older, it sometimes becomes difficult to perform various activities without help – such as grooming, driving, managing the household, taking medication or other common activities. The next few questions ask about assistance with these activities from both paid (from someone who is not a family member) and unpaid caregivers (family and friends).

B1 B1

Have you ever arranged or are currently arranging paid or unpaid care for an adult, including yourself, who needed help because of a condition related to aging?

- 1 Yes, paid only
- 2 Yes, paid and unpaid
- 3 Yes, unpaid only
- 4 No

IF B1 = Yes, paid only or B1 = Yes, paid and unpaid THEN

| One of the reasons why people need care is if someone is experiencing age-related cognitive impairment, like memory loss or dementia. The next question asks about a person with memory loss or dementia for whom you've arranged care, including yourself. If you have arranged care for more than one person with memory loss or dementia, please think about the most recent person for whom you arranged care.
