FS52 BROKER
The term broker is a legal term that refers to people who are in the business of buying and selling securities (called trading) on behalf of customers. Individual people employed by brokerage firms are often called stockbrokers and are officially referred to as registered representatives of the brokerage firm. But these individuals also use many other unofficial titles. These include financial consultant, financial adviser, and investment consultant. In recent years, brokerage firms have increasingly offered a broader range of investment planning services in addition to buying and selling securities. In order to sell securities, brokers must pass the General Securities Registered Representative Examination. Brokers are required: 1) to know your financial situation well enough to understand your financial needs, and 2) to recommend investments that are suitable for you based on that knowledge. Brokers are required to provide disclosures, but not required to provide up-front disclosure regarding possible conflicts of interest, and whether they have any record of disciplinary actions against them. You can check a person’s or firm’s disciplinary record by visiting the SEC website. In addition to being regulated directly by the SEC and by state securities regulators, brokers are subject to regulation by FINRA, an industry self-regulatory organization. Many brokers receive their compensation based on commissions clients pay each time they buy or sell a security. Some brokers may charge a fee based on a percentage of the assets in the client’s account, hourly fees, an annual fee, a flat fee, or a retainer fee for a particular service or range of services. On a scale from 0 to 100, what do you think is the percent chance that you will seek (or continue to seek) services from a broker in the next 5 years?

The term investment adviser is a legal term that describes a broad range of people who are in the business of giving advice about securities (the term “securities” includes stocks, bonds, mutual funds, and annuities). They may use a variety of titles in addition to investment adviser, such as investment manager, investment counsel, asset manager, wealth manager, or portfolio manager. Investment advisers provide ongoing management of investments based on the client’s objectives. There are no official certification or licensing requirements for investment advisers. Investment advisers are subject to a fiduciary duty. That means they have to provide advice and recommend investments that they view as being the best for you. Investment advisers also are required to provide up-front disclosures about their qualifications, what services they provide, how they are compensated, possible conflicts of interest, and whether they have any record of disciplinary actions against them. They are regulated directly by either the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) or by state securities regulators, depending on the amount of assets they have under management. Many investment advisers charge a fee based on a percentage of the assets in the client’s account. The percentages charged can vary significantly from provider to provider. Also, providers typically charge larger accounts based on lower percentage rates. Some investment advisers may charge hourly fees, an annual fee, a flat fee, or retainer fee for a particular service or range of services. On a scale from 0 to 100, what do you think is the percent chance that you will seek (or continue to seek) services from an investment adviser in the next 5 years?
